

The A9 Bursary

removing barriers

diversity in literature

creating opportunities

challenging discrimination

Moniack Mhor's mission is to support emerging writers from all over the world, from all walks of life and from all backgrounds. As a national charity based in Scotland, we would like to provide additional encouragement and support to women writers who experience discrimination and inequality, including writers from black and ethnic minority backgrounds, LGBTQ writers and working-class writers.

Thanks to the generous support of two writers, we can now offer a short-term bursary scheme for women writers over the age of 18 who identify as from a BAME background, as LGBTQ or as working class.

Bursaries may be used to support fees for residential courses at Moniack Mhor Creative Writing Centre, or for costs such as childcare or travel to courses.

For further details or to apply to The A9 Bursary, please telephone 01463 741 675 or visit www.moniackmhor.org.uk/writers/bursaries

Please note that Moniack Mhor continues to operate a wider bursary programme for any writer who may find fees a barrier to accessing our courses and support.
