

If Streets Could Talk

October 12th to 14th 2020 at Moniack Mhor

Work with a writer and a street artist to produce a striking and thought-provoking 10-metre street art mural.

On the first day you will work in a group with award-winning playwright, novelist and performer Alan Bissett who will help you to describe what it is that you really want to say and how you want to say it – in images.

Then you will team up with artist Marc Delaye from Freshpaint, who will teach you how to turn your words into a powerful (and large) mural.

You don't have to be a writer or an artist – just come and try.

Because of the Covid - 19 virus this will be a smaller event than normal, so if you are interested please book quickly. Unfortunately there will be no overnight accommodation available.

As much as possible the workshop will be held outside and masks will be provided but bring warm old clothes as you may get painted.
